The Reason Why

We have never published a series of language and grammar which has at once become so popular as STEPS IN ENGLISH. The reason is easy to understand; there is no series which so clearly emphasizes the creative in English, which, after all, is the desideratum and the only logical result worth striving for in the teaching of language and grammar. The ability of the school graduate to speak and write English is the test. When he has closed his text book and begins the serious work of life after school days are over, then it is proved whether or not his preparation has been good or ill. Such a series as STEPS IN ENGLISH was bound to come. Teachers have been looking for it.

There is no society on the church calendar more worthy of commendation, and no association of women numerically stronger than The Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association. The primary object for which this society was founded was to provide insurance—HOME PROTECTION AT COST, and to promote friendship, unity and true Catholic charity among its members.

The rates of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association are based on its own experience, and, although much lower than the National Fraternal Congress table, have thus far proved adequate.

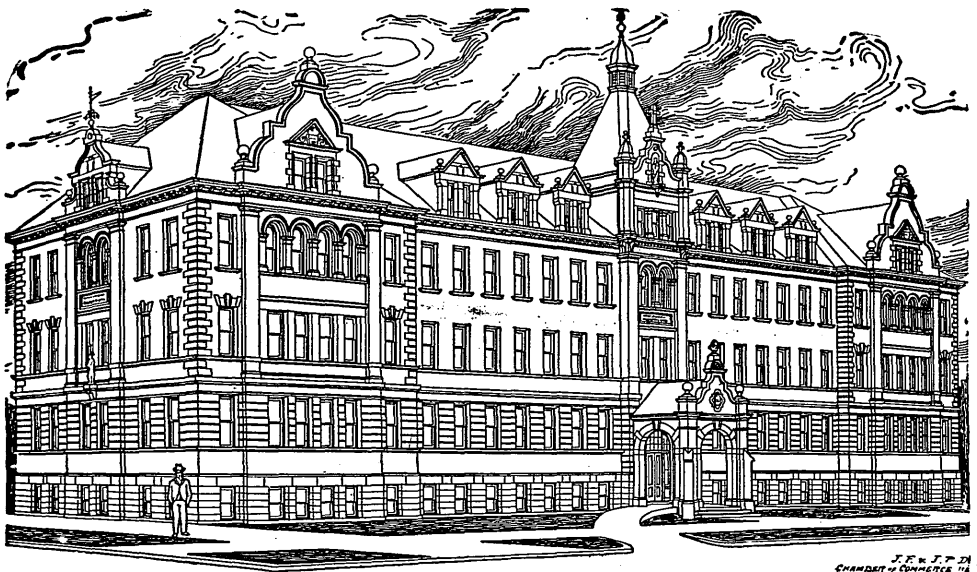

The phenomenal growth since its organization in 1890 speaks well for its perpetuity.

Preface

The present work has been prepared in response to a strong demand for such a publication. The rapid growth and increasing importance of Catholic interests in our community and state, the number and size of Catholic institutions and organizations, the prominent and vital relations they hold to every interest of the commonwealth and people, and their particular features of commercial and social concern, all emphasize the need of a convenient source of information, comprehensive, accurate and up-to-date.

The work makes no pretense to historical standing. It includes a few sketches of institutions, places, and lines of activity, of special interest or recent undertaking, in which Catholics in particular and the public in general feel deep concern. The obvious intent of the work is to put in compendious form a large body of fact respecting the range and variety of Catholic interests and activity in the Archdiocese of Chicago and State of Illinois, making it easily accessible and absolutely indispensable to every intelligent citizen, and particularly to those in the business world.

It naturally follows that the interests of the Catholic Church in the Archdiocese of Chicago should attain the magnitude and importance which demand a publication of this character. Before the Indian's tepee had given place to the white man's cabin in this region the Catholic Church had mapped this territory within the field of her labors and had filled it with zealous toilers for the Red-man's salvation. The noble, saintly endeavor of the early missionaries and martyrs has been succeeded by the unceasing, heroic efforts of devoted men and women, whose labors have produced marvels of achievement in every field of church interest. The humble chapel has been replaced by the artistic, imposing church, beautified in form and feature as properly befits the house of God. Hospitals and homes for the wayward, sick and aged, extend God's charity to thousands of our poor and unfortunate fellow-beings. Schools, colleges, and seminaries, provide Christian training for children and youth of both sexes, and, in addition to the benefits of elementary and higher instruction, develop in them those noble traits of Christian manhood and womanhood, which constitute the high distinction of the honored Catholic citizen.

Through the civilizing power of the Church, every line of culture is opened and every influence of sanctity and beauty brought close to the lives of its members. Through this agency, society is purified and men are impressed with the meaning of obligation and a proper conception of duty.

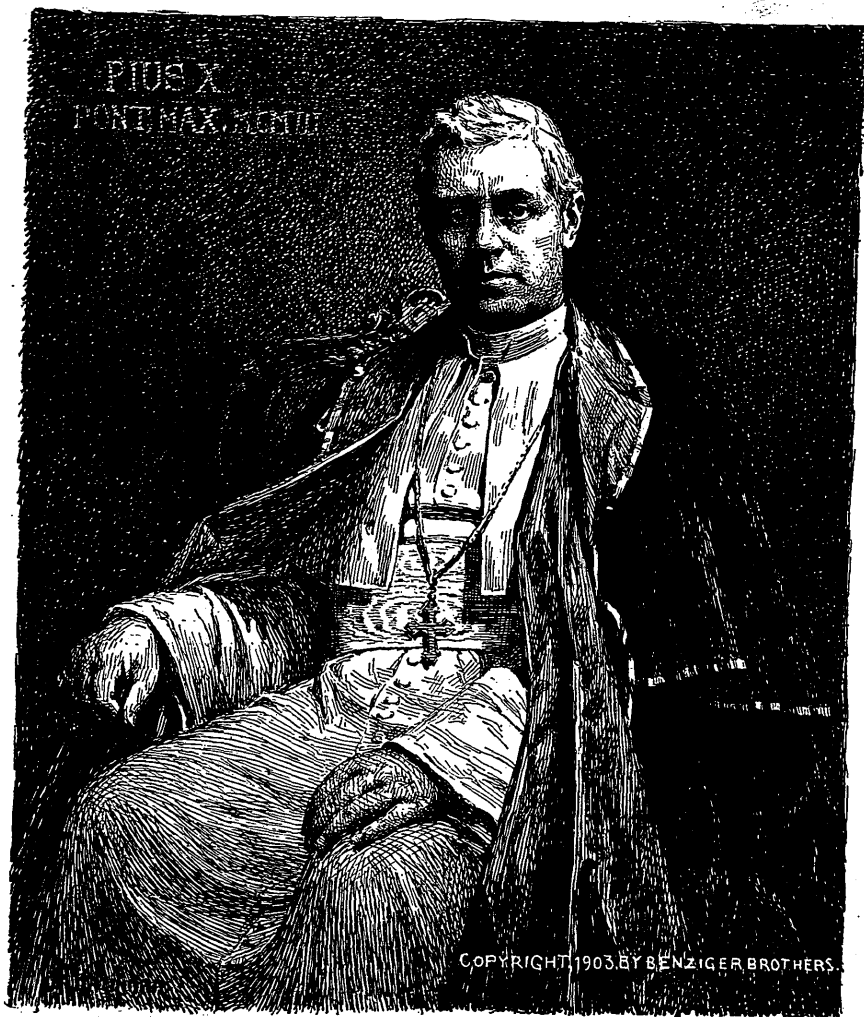

In this State of Illinois where an active, progressive, prosperous civilization has supplanted so rapidly the savagery and wilderness of a recent past, the Catholic Church is the most potent force for good. Hence, it is essential that full, accurate information of every important feature of its local organization and activity should be easily accessible, and to afford this information is the purpose of this work. Necessarily its defects are many. We bespeak your kind appreciation and commendation of its merits.

Pere Marquette and the Introduction of Catholicity in Illinois

Seldom do truthful historians neglect to record the credit that is due to the early missionaries in the Western Hemisphere, their fidelity to God, their sublime faith, their lofty ideals and exalted courage. If the grand and noble ever captivate the human mind; if daring courage and self-sacrifice—the symbol of truth and devotion—ever win our respect; if the heroic spirit, even in its merely human manifestations in noblemen of nature, ever commands our admiration, how much more those qualities are enhanced when found in the grand soul and exalted character of that soldier of the Cross, Pere Marquette; they soar to sublimity and blend with the eternal and divine. “Peaceful, benign, beneficent,” says Parkman, “were the weapons of this conquest. Marquette aimed to subdue, not by the sword, but by the Cross. He invaded but to convert and civilize.” In the words of a non-Catholic writer: “The Jesuits were found in the depths of the Peruvian mines, in the African slave marts, in the Spice Islands, and in the conservatories of China. They made converts in regions which neither avarice nor curiosity had tempted any of their countrymen to enter, and preached and disputed in tongues of which no other native of the west understood a word.” To this intrepid phalanx of intrepid knights belonged our illustrious Marquette.

Cast in the mould of Loyola, in his ardent zeal and deep religious life, in his dauntless courage and self sacrifice, in his forgetfulness of the dearest ties for the love of God and His creatures, and in his intense devotion and singleness of purpose, Marquette revealed a character true to his prototype. Tidings from his fellow soldiers, toiling amid hardships and perils in the far off savage wilds, roused his valorous spirit and turned his vision towards the dark horizon whence he heard the voices of his brethren re-echo. Fired by heavenly zeal, Marquette in exceeding joy gave a parting glance to civilization, and turned his face toward barbarous lands. There was naught before him but obscure toil, solitude, privations, hardships, and perhaps a martyr's death, but these were welcome to him in the service of his Master. Yet, incidental to the achievements of his religious mission were some of the most portentous events and discoveries in the history of his beloved France. "His discovery of the Mississippi," says an American historian, "was the greatest discovery of Marquette's age."

We cannot doubt that the Catholic Church, perceiving all things in the wisdom and will of God, observed, with rapturous joy, the course and progress of the frail canoe that bore down the great

"Father of Waters" the weight of a nation's spiritual inheritance. For never did king or queen make such a triumphal march through mighty kingdoms as did that saintly ambassador of Christ in the valley of the Mississippi. Through primeval forests, over virgin prairies, and on the waters of unknown rivers, the Heaven-appointed bearer of glad tidings braved the utmost dangers to accomplish the work of a higher wisdom. Worldly pomp and ceremonies were lacking, but by heavenly light he was guided and sustained. The greater the simplicity from a human viewpoint, the greater the imperceptible glory of the joyous choir of angelic beings surrounding this saintly missionary; and the more lonely his pathway, the more magnificent the winged procession of glad spirits that followed him, as in the name of God Most High he took possession of the virgin soil of Illinois. Here amid bands of cruel savages he planted the tiny seed that among civilized growths has become so stately a tree. Of its fruitful developments we have evidence in the prosperity of the Archdiocese of Chicago and dependent Dioceses of Alton, Belleville and Peoria, for not only to the savage children of the forests did Father Marquette bring his heavenly message; but the never-failing voice of the Holy Spirit bore it down through the centuries to the white settlers who now inhabit the land he loved so well. For while later civilization brought with it the ancient faith, it was strengthened by words and hymns still sounding through the sweet untainted air in the voices of the simple children of the forest, whose souls the mission saint had awakened. And now, where once were Indian homes, are flourishing dioceses; where wigwams stood, tower the spires of stately cathedrals.

After a brief absence Father Marquette returned in 1673 with his companion, Joliet, a Canadian merchant, and made a brief stay with the tribe of the Peorias. He so endeared himself to them that only upon his promise to return and establish a mission among them was he permitted to depart. This promise to the "gentle Illini" he set out to keep late in the year 1674. The devoted priest started from the Straits of Mackinaw, crossed Lake Michigan, and then passed along its western shore until, worn in body but indefatigable in soul, he reached the mouth of the "Chicagou." Incapable of proceeding further on his way to the expectant tribe in the Illinois valley, he sent a message to inform them of the fact, and many of them hastened to his side, happy to be of service to him until such time as his restoration to health would permit him to carry out his noble purpose. His holy ministrations brought spiritual joy and the peace of God to the inhabitants of many an Indian village before he turned his face to the north to begin his homeward journey through the wilderness. His Indian companions sincerely revered him, and during his final illness ministered to his every want with exceeding tenderness and devotion. His death in 1675 plunged his Indian converts into deep gloom and removed from this world one of the most beneficent, heroic souls that ever blessed the earth.

Illinois was at that time a wide, uncultivated territory, teeming with rich promise of the agricultural wealth of the future. It had no white inhabitants, but they were not to be long in coming, nor were they slow, when once arrived, in rendering this one of the fairest and richest of the great states, neither did they fail to devote part of its noble resources to the support and to the propagation of religion.

Illinois is now dotted, over all its extent, with church edifices, and everywhere that the number of children requires it and means render it possible, the school stands beside the church, as outworks beside a citadel for mutual support and protection.

The Spirit in Catholic Architecture

History informs us that Catholic church architecture has a long and glorious record. We read that at the beginning of the seventh century, besides solidity of structure, it presented a just proportion and harmony of parts. The seventh and eighth centuries were times of great devotion in the church, and, consequently, a great church building era. Kings and nobles were the patrons of architecture, which was encouraged by the Popes and fostered by the spirit of the age. Great temples were generously erected to the honor and glory of God, at times in commemoration of the beloved dead, and often by individuals as an act of thanksgiving to the Almighty, upon being granted special favors.

It is instructive and inspiring for any architect to visit European countries and study the architecture of early Christian civilization. The inconceivable beauty, strength and durability of these magnificent temples, erected centuries ago, baffle human comprehension, and we are led to the inevitable conclusion that the schools of the Comacine Masters approached as near perfection as our conception of the artist's mind is capable of appreciating.

To describe even superficially the architectural achievement accomplished in St. Peter's, Rome, would require many volumes, and a mind capable of appreciating art in all its ramifications.

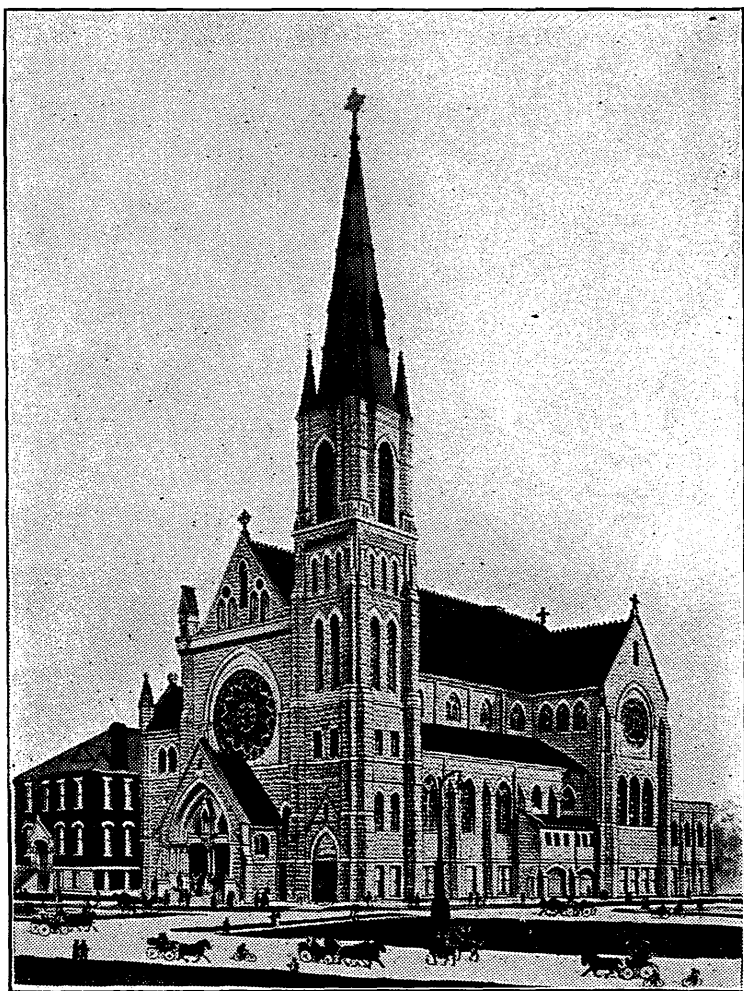

The glories of our religion are not alone in Catholic doctrine, moral life and literature, but architecture most surpassingly artistic is included in Catholic achievements. Possessed by exalted genius, and inspired by an intense love of God and the work of His Holy Church, the mediaeval architect ranged over the whole field of design, and the exuberance of his power and inimitable skill left untouched no feature or combination of constructive form. Consequently, it is not surprising to find a lack of originality in our present day religious architecture; artists are satisfied to copy; they do not attempt to originate. It is somewhat strange that while for the last six or eight centuries the human mind has been in the highest degree active, we have advanced little in art. Architects of our day do not approach their work with the proper spirit; they do not seek Divine inspiration, as did Fra Angelico, Raphael and Angelo. The present is an age of cold commercialism and the majority of architects are unappreciative and painfully weak on the spiritual plane of their profession. No Raphaels to-day are to be found at age; the field is more extensive, and the material and social conditions more advantageous. But there can be no great masters of religious art without a whole-souled consecration of the artist, possessed by an overpowering passion for the cause of religion and devotion to the service of God. His mind will conceive, his pencil sketch, and his skill construct and execute, these sublime, masterful products that have seemed as fashioned by the touch of God, only when his soul burns with the love of God, and his deft fingers fashion skillfully and true, in motive, form and feature, the living spirit of our Holy Church.

One of the crowning glories of the Catholic Church in all ages has been her art. Architectural achievements and the perpetuation and preservation of art, have been the pride and concern of Catholic agencies since the time of Christ. Temples, however magnificent, rich and imposing, can only be considered as a tribute of small human endeavor to the extension and preservation of the living Temple of the Holy Ghost—the Divine institution—Christ Himself established on earth, and promised to remain therewith even to the consummation of the world. Catholics of all times have always held devoutly to the opinion that no edifice, however beautiful, could be considered adequate as the house of God, and the intensity of Catholic devotion to Holy Mother Church has been strongly inscribed in her architecture.

Nowhere in the United States at present is so much attention devoted to form and beauty in church architecture as in Chicago, and this without any sacrifice of utility and convenience. In the short period that His Grace, Archbishop Quigley, has been in charge of this Archdiocese, many structures have been erected and many others projected, and it has been the wish of His Grace that careful attention should be devoted to the harmony of form and purpose in designing them.

It is of interest to know who is advancing and maintaining the dignity and glory of architecture in Catholic Chicago. Much credit and consideration is due the man who makes a life study of art for art's sake, but when such a mind is imbued with the spirit of Christianity and devotes a life to research and an exhaustive study of the world's greatest architecture, for the love of excelling in it, then let it be said that such a man deserves the esteem and appreciation of all interested in the perpetuation of the unexcelled magnificence achieved in Catholic architecture in the Middle Ages.

Architecture includes two phases, theory and construction. The former comprehends the artistic side, the body of general rules inspired by motive and taste, and based on tradition, and the science, which admits of demonstration by means of invariable and absolute formulae. Practice is the application of the theory to particular needs and conditions; it is practice which causes the art and the science to conform to the nature of material, to climate, to the customs of the period, or to the requirements of the case.

It is safe to assert that architecture is the one applied science that holds more strongly to tradition than any other, and when our attention is forcibly called to this fact we pause in astonishment and inquire, Why should the architect copy? Why does he not always originate?

The architecture of Catholic churches, schools and colleges is receiving much attention from the hierarchy of the country. At no previous time, perhaps, in the history of the archdiocese of Chicago was such growth manifest as has been shown within the past few years. The rapid increase in the Catholic population and the ardent desire of the church authorities to fully meet the spiritual and educational needs of the people, are responsible for this era of building activity. In all ages architecture has been fostered and encouraged by the Catholic Church, and architectural glories, most surpassing and artistic, are to be found in her institutions. National ideals were created by the Catholic Church and recorded in her architecture. But, though race and country developed diversity in form and feature, the spirit and inspiration of Catholic architecture in all countries ever remain the same.

An Appreciation

In no department of literature is there greater freedom than in the field of Catholic journalism. There the writer expresses untrammelled his inmost personal thought and conviction, guided by the unerring light of divine faith and teaching. The editor of a Catholic paper caters to no party, no influence, no current mode, but stands for right, truth and duty, as seen in the light of God's holy word.

REV. THOMAS E. JUDGE, S. T. P.
Editor The New World.

He is not trimming his sails to catch the breeze, but more commonly in the heavy stress of storm and tempest he is found battling for the right and pointing the way to the haven of safety. Hence, the spirit of the Catholic journal is the spirit of the editor, whose soul is embodied in its life, and whose power and devotion are displayed in the scope, intensity and effect of its work.

Most clearly does The New World exemplify this truth. In its every department the spirit of its editor is potent. From the day that Rev. Thomas E. Judge took it in charge, his activity, strength and vigor have been visible on every page. Without fear of untruth we can say that The New World stands to-day without a peer in Catholic journalism in the United States. It is rare to find in the journalistic field a man possessed of the many admirable qualities of Father Judge. Keenly alive to a situation, he is broad and comprehensive in his grasp of salient features, while his subtle power of analysis leaves no detail unseen. He is forceful and conclusive in argument, apt in illustration, sharp and bitter in sarcasm and invective, yet most kindly and generous in his appreciation and judgment of an opponent's limitations and motives. His pre-eminent skill in dialectic, coupled with a profound knowledge of philosophy and psychology, and a facile command of virile expression, make him an adversary to be feared and a writer to be enjoyed. He is profound in his perception of tendencies and their inevitable results, and he sounds a warning, or hurls scathing denunciation, that rings out like the clarion tones of an apostle. He is patriotic and inspiring and in his persuasive enthusiasm bears the reader's soul aloft to fields of noble thought and action familiar to his own. Father Judge's extensive knowledge of educational questions and principles, his thorough familiarity with social theories and problems, and their timely, courageous discussion, make his writings a most potent force in our religious and social life, and in consequence The New World becomes invaluable to Catholics and non-Catholics alike.

Orator, Actor, Priest

Classed as the greatest living dramatic orator and magnetic speaker, the Rev. L. J. Vaughan is in great demand as a lecturer on Shakespearean subjects, and has filled 192 engagements, covering the country from Maine to California, during the past year, 1905-6.

During his recent lectures in Chicago, where he is well known, hundreds of people have been turned away from the halls where he spoke, for lack of seating capacity. Perhaps the best evidence of his popularity and fame is demonstrated by the fact that scores of people who know him come time after time from great distances to hear him, and all voice the same sentiment of his superior intellectual attainments. Perhaps this is accounted for by reason of the fact that besides being a perfect master of oratory, he possesses a personality remarkable for ease, grace and charm. With him, the gift of eloquence is natural, and his thrilling sentiment charms his audience, while his convincing argument impresses his hearers with his own high conception of the beautiful in life.

Among his most popular lectures are: "Sermons from Shakespeare," "The Power of Love," "The Light That Failed," "The Land of Possibilities," "Is Life Worth Living," "Shylock," "Julius Cæsar," "A Light on Richelieu," "The Story of the Stage," etc. While it is difficult to determine in which lecture Father Vaughan appears to the best advantage, he is especially well fitted to discuss Shakespearean subjects, having been twelve years on the stage before becoming a priest, the greater part of which time he spent in playing Shakspearean roles. His view of Shakespeare is broad, generous, and in part unique. He presents great truths as vividly as flashes of lightning, and possesses the rare ability of making popular the classical lecture. His interpretation of Shakespearean characters is equal to that of the greatest actors of the day.

His twelve years of experience on the stage has made him capable of acting every word he utters.

Catholic Literature

Its Nature and Influence.

Very truly has Leo XIII declared "A Catholic Journal is a perpetual mission in a parish." Seldom has that great man given expression to a sentence of more importance than this. We do not seem to feel the full force of this idea. We are too strongly occupied with our material interests to realize that we are in any way bound to support a Catholic publication, even though that publication be the recognized official paper. We appreciate the need of such a journal and the benefits derived from a careful study of its pages, we commend its fearless stand on matters affecting our religious belief, but we do not consider that only by our individual co-operation do we make possible its existence and success. There is scarcely another word in the English language more often used than the word duty, and it is doubtful whether there is a word less effective as a motive of action. We submit to necessity and fulfill our immediate obligation, but we seldom live by that higher law which goes beyond either. What the world sees we keep straight and well ordered, but where public opinion does not enter there lies our weakness.

In an age and country characterized as this is, by indifferentism in religious belief, and laxity of principle in social morality, when reading of all kinds finds its way into the household and fathers and mothers, sons and daughters, meet all sorts of people in their daily associations—a religious journal is a necessity, absolute and positive, in every Christian home. It is the duty, therefore, of every Catholic convinced of this necessity, to lend a helping hand to the support of such journalism. We do not take magazines mainly for the news they contain; we take them for their intelligent discussion of current questions, their well presented descriptive articles, their high class fiction. The Catholic weekly gives us mature editorial discussion, a full review of current news, literary selections and home reading of a high order, and all from a Catholic standpoint.

No matter how well parents discharge their duty to their children, too often we find the Catholic in childhood, in manhood, and even in old age, with but a vague conception of the duty he owes to God, to his parents and to society. The son of the man who says "I do not read a Catholic paper," will say "I do not go to church." It is not only the sacred duty of man to worship his creator; it is his greatest privilege. Any influence that leads him to practice his religious duties and conform to the requirements of true Christian life is blessed by God and deserves the support of Christian men. Such an influence is a Catholic paper. The Catholic journal is often criticised by Catholics who do not understand the special work such a journal has to perform, and who do not appreciate the purpose of its existence. Some readers want only news, others desire learned articles; some look to the paper for their political doctrines, and others, again, censure it for the remotest political allusion; while the main purpose should be to have a Catholic journal Catholic. The indifference of the Catholic community and the lack of support are what retard the progress of Catholic journalism.

No Catholic who is interested in his religion can afford to neglect the reading of Catholic literature. A Catholic paper is an educator, a guide, a stimulator and the reflector of Catholic life, and a reader of such literature will increase in fervor and become more fully imbued with Catholic principles. In supporting a Catholic journal, we are helping to spread the gospel of light and increase Christian knowledge.

One of the ablest assistant priests in the Catholic Archdiocese of Illinois has declared that he considers it an obligation of the most binding nature to advocate the circulation of a Catholic periodical in his parish.

Catholic literature strengthens our faith, keeps us right on questions of public policy, especially those affecting the church.

The reasons for supporting a Catholic journal are doubly strong when applied to our own local paper, THE NEW WORLD. You have no doubt observed the high standing this estimable journal has attained, and the place it has gained in public opinion. It has the confidence of the Catholic public and the respect of the non-Catholic element in the community. While it is essentially a religious paper, it also deals with a wide range of secular interests. It is the official journal of the Archdiocese of Chicago and the Province of Illinois. It is recognized as a high class journal, throughout the United States and Canada, and numbers among its contributors leading writers of all countries.

In supporting a Catholic journal, we are helping to spread the gospel of light and increase Christian knowledge.

One of the ablest assistant priests in the Catholic Archdiocese of Illinois has declared that he considers it an obligation of the most binding nature to advocate the circulation of a Catholic periodical in his parish.

Catholic literature strengthens our faith, keeps us right on questions of public policy, especially those affecting the church.

The reasons for supporting a Catholic journal are doubly strong when applied to our own local paper, THE NEW WORLD. You have no doubt observed the high standing this estimable journal has attained, and the place it has gained in public opinion. It has the confidence of the Catholic public and the respect of the non-Catholic element in the community. While it is essentially a religious paper, it also deals with a wide range of secular interests. It is the official journal of the Archdiocese of Chicago and the Province of Illinois. It is recognized as a high class journal, throughout the United States and Canada, and numbers among its contributors leading writers of all countries.

The Catholic Church Extension Society of the United States of America

The formation a short time ago of the Catholic Church Extension Society of the United States of America, of which His Grace,

REV. FRANCIS C. KELLEY.

Most Reverend James Edward Quigley, Archbishop of Chicago, is Chairman of the Board of Governors, and Reverend Francis Clement Kelley, Lapeer, Michigan, is President, is a much needed missionary work of far reaching importance which cannot fail to bear fruitful and beneficent results.

The purposes of the Society, as set forth in the articles of association, are: The diffusion of moral and religious knowledge, by the cultivation of the missionary obligation and spirit in the people of the Catholic Church of the United States of America, through the collection and disbursing of funds in any portion of the United States, such funds to be used to aid the erection of religious edifices, to support clergy for them, or in any other way, which may seem right and proper to the Board of Governors. In a word, to carry the Faith of Jesus Christ to thousands of scattered Catholics in every portion of our own land, especially in country districts and among immigrants.

The officers of the Society are: Most Reverend James Edward Quigley, D. D., Chairman of the Board of Governors; Rev. Francis C. Kelley, Lapeer, Mich., President; Hon. William P. Breen, LL. D., Fort Wayne, Ind., Treasurer.

As its name indicates, the Society is national in its scope, and asks every member of the Catholic Church to aid in its worthy charity. The officers of the movement have formed a chain-card system to collect funds to carry on the work. Each person pledges a dollar to the Endowment Fund, and promises to secure two others to sign a similar pledge within ten days after receipt of instructions from the Society. By pledging one dollar a person becomes a contributing member of the Society and is entitled to the Extension Magazine for one year. The Society asks for donations large or small. Five thousand dollars ($5,000) entitles the donor to an Honorary Membership with the title of Founder.

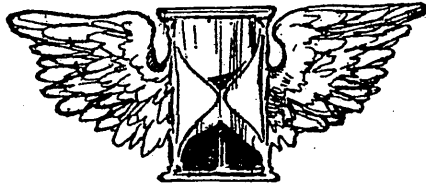

The aim of the Society is to establish the Church in the smaller towns and villages throughout the United States, and thus keep in the Faith those who, from lack of Catholic worship and priests, attend non-Catholic churches.

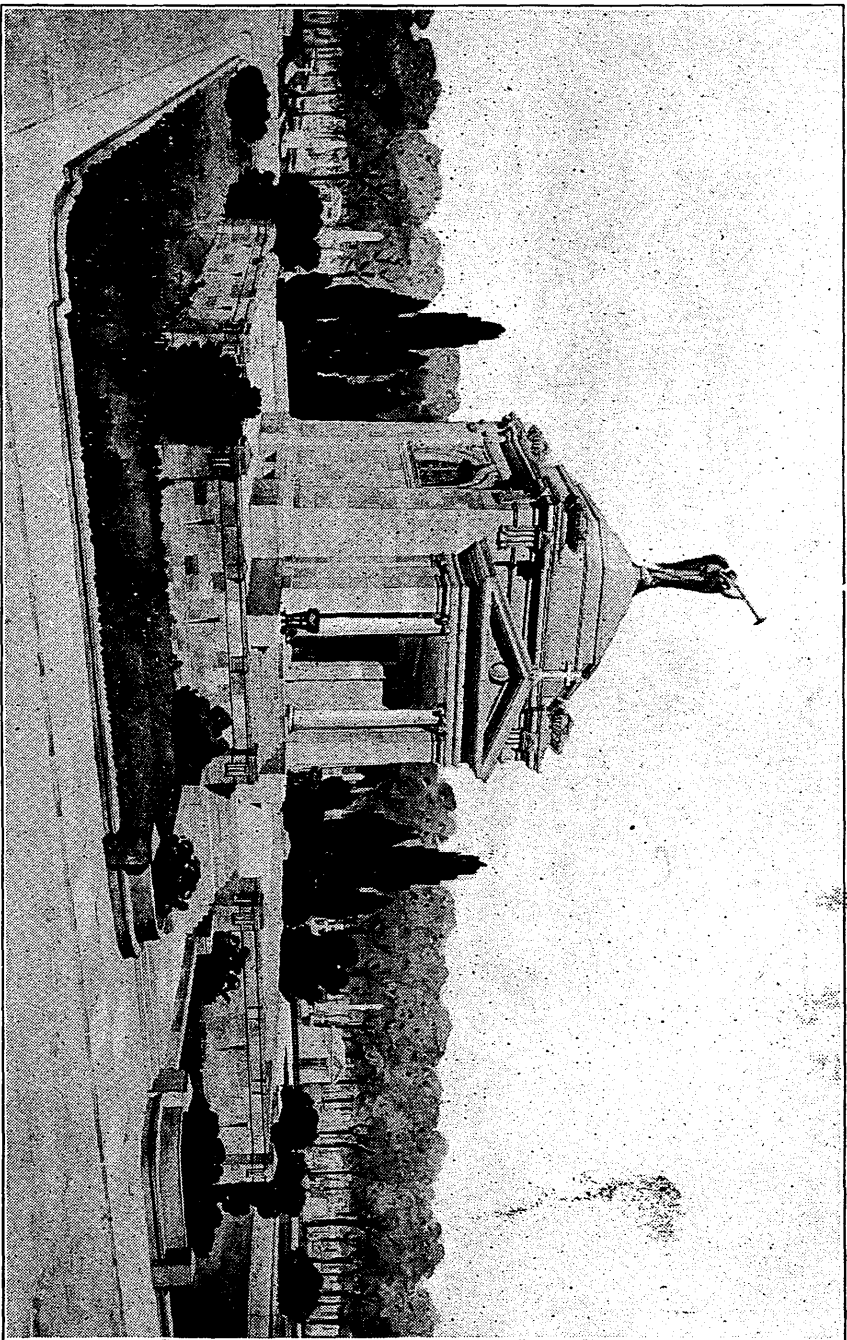

The movement is indorsed by the Apostolic Delegate, His Excellency, Most Rev. D. Falconio, who compares the organization of the Catholic Church Extension Society of the United States of America to the beginnings of that now colossal association of the "Society of St. Vincent de Paul." He says: "Of the success of the Catholic Extension Society I entertain no doubt. Yours is a holy movement, long expected and greatly needed and cannot fail to touch the heart of the generous American public even in a manner more efficient than other associations which, though praiseworthy in their beneficence, cannot equal in their aim the great object you have in view, namely, the preservation of the Faith and the salvation of souls.

“Most heartily do I bless the society and pray that God may crown your efforts with ample success.”

MAUSOLEUM FOR CHICAGO PRELATES.

This illustration shows how the new Mausoleum for Chicago Prelates in Mount Carmel Cemetery will look when completed. It is being erected by the Most Reverend Archbishop Guigley, and it is to serve as the last resting place of all the Archbishops and Bishops of the diocese. The mausoleum was designed by Architect William J. Brinkmann of Chicago, and while plain and simple in outline, it will present an artistic finish in classic architecture. The arrangements of the tomb provide for eighteen crypts.

The Cathedral College of the Sacred Heart

The nucleus of one of the most important Catholic institutions in the United States is the Cathedral College of the Sacred Heart, located on the corner of Cass and Superior streets, Chicago.

In accordance with the conception of the Council of Trent, 1563, that each Bishop should educate under his immediate supervision young men whose vocation was of a religious bent, our beloved Archbishop, with vivifying energy, is sowing the seed which must in the future bear fruit abundantly.

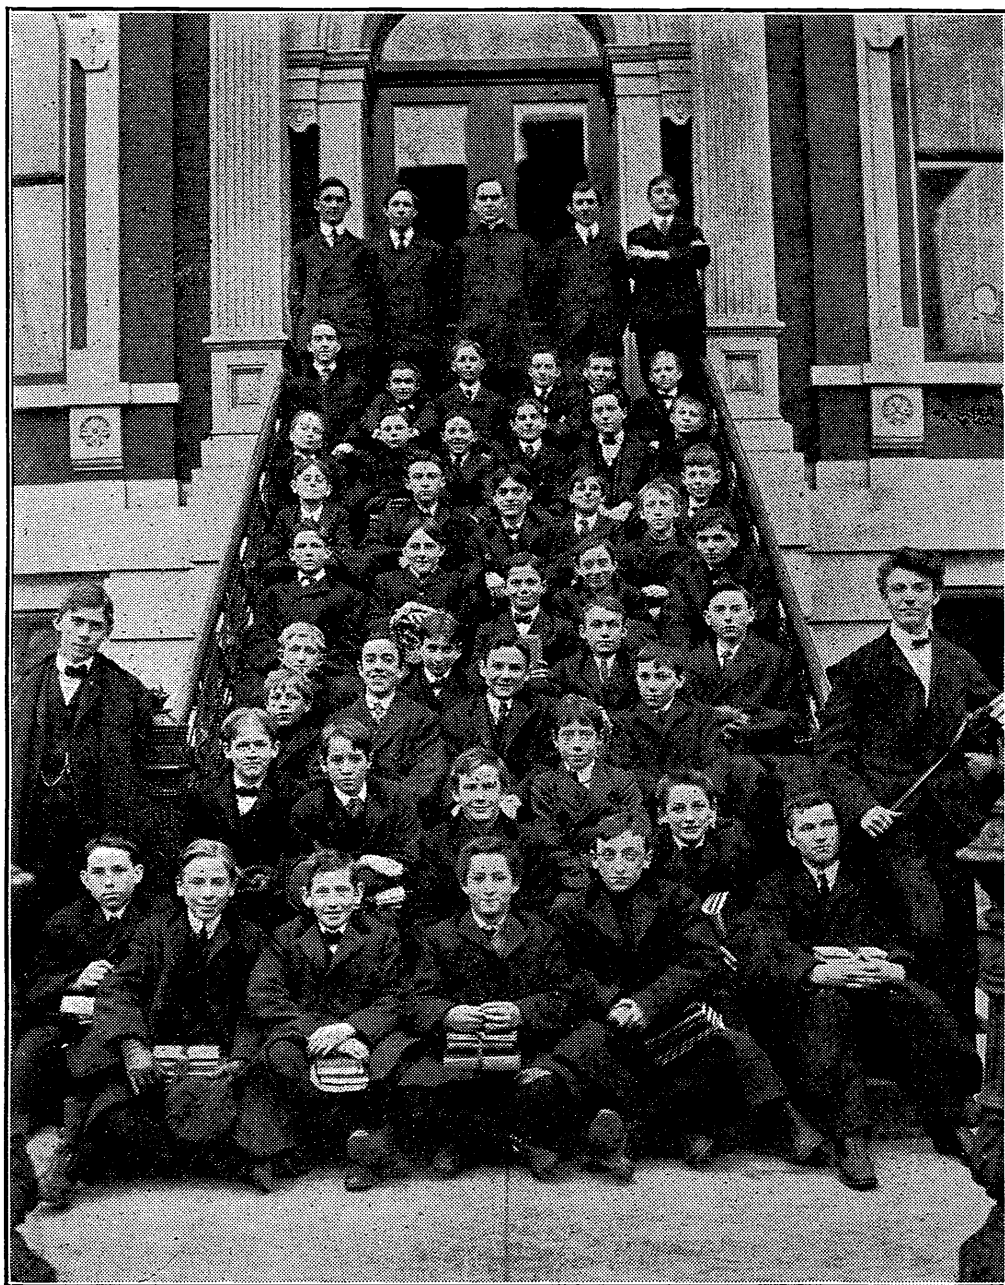

With the idea of establishing a College and Seminary for the equipment of young men for the priesthood, His Grace, about three years ago, selected a number of young priests whose mental gifts qualified them in a special manner for the work of teaching, and sent them to the American College at Rome, to equip themselves for this important mission.

During the last twelve months a college with preparatory courses in the several departments has been established and organized with those scholarly fathers in charge. The purpose of the Cathedral College is far reaching; not alone is it a school where the classics and the higher branches of learning are taught, but the pupil who enters into the spirit of the instruction is influenced by the atmosphere of deep Christian piety and devotion in which he labors, and is inspired by the sympathy and emulation of these around him.

A common school education is required of all those who enter.

The length of the course is twelve years, six of which are devoted to classical studies, and six to philosophy and theology. As day pupils, the boys are required to spend four of the first six years at the Cathedral College, and the remaining eight years at the Seminary, which will probably be located in Chicago and ready to receive them four years hence.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd in Chicago—Their Sublime Mission

In a great commercial center like Chicago it is not surprising that the nobler and pathetic elements in human nature and conduct are to some extent overlooked. In a city which includes over two million inhabitants it is natural to find, as the world goes, a certain though small percentage of wayward children. And when the necessity, in fact the obligation, to provide for and protect the fallen is forcibly impressed on our generous people, Chicago has never been known to turn a deaf ear.

On the north side of the city in the center of spacious grounds is a large new building that stretches out its wide wings as if they were those of a brooding dove. This is the House of the Good Shepherd that gathers within its walls the fallen women, the outcasts of the streets, gives them shelter, and lovingly leads them to the feet of Him who had pity on the Magdalen of old and made her soul whiter than snow.

The bad are not so bad, and the good are not so good when relative responsibility is compared. Like the scribes of old, many try to condone in themselves that which they condemn in others. One of the most cruel and pathetic things in life is that when a woman has once sinned society instinctively unites against her. Almost every door is shut in her face. Almost every honest avocation is barred to her. Women draw their skirts away from her and stab her with scornful glances; she finds no place of repentance, though she seeks it with tears. It is then that she may turn from the pitiless world to the House of the Good Shepherd, where welcome hands lead her across the threshold and pure-souled Nuns take her to their hearts and bind up the wounds that life has dealt.

Everybody is more or less acquainted with the noble mission of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, but few know specifically the scope and magnitude of the great humanitarian work which they are carrying forward.

HOUSE OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

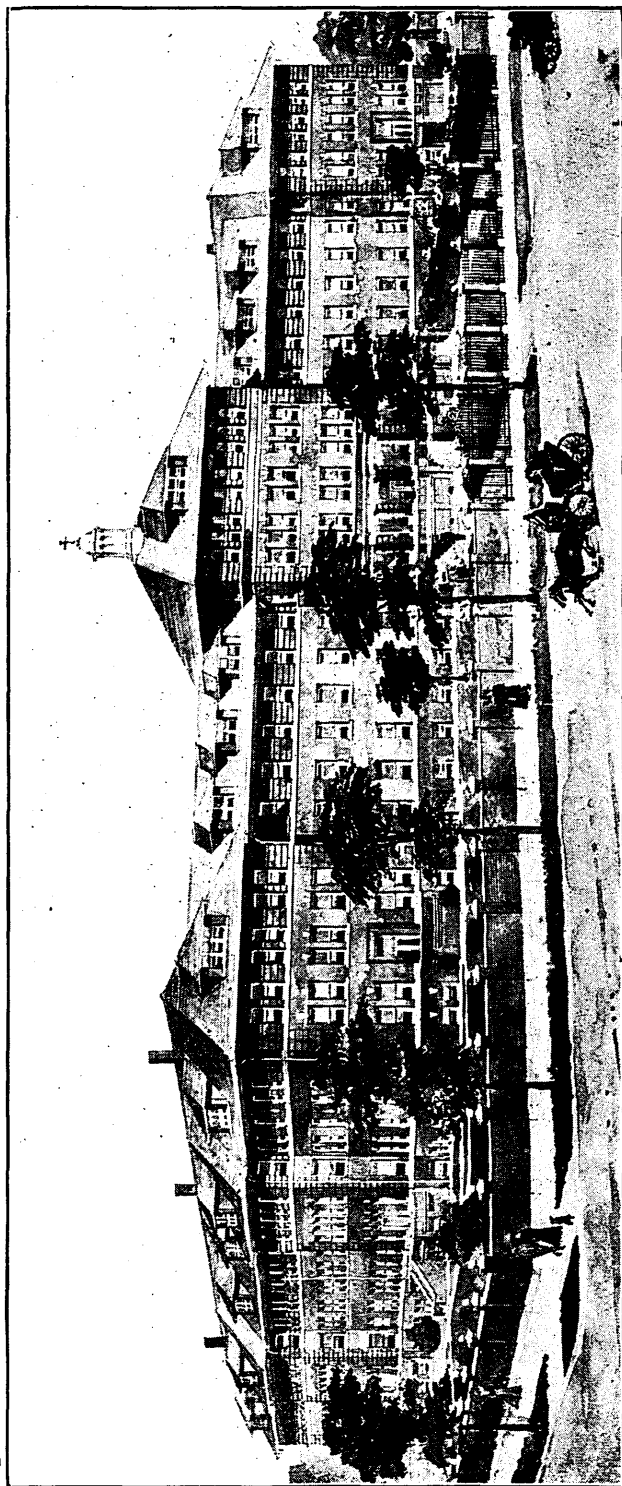

Within the gateway of their Home one has a strange sense of being stranded for an instant on some Island of the Blessed. Without, the world beats in noisy waves above the high convent walls. Within, all is peace, serenity and quiet. Without is sin and temptation, struggle and despair. Within is infinite calm and rest, and you can understand how the poor storm-tossed souls, who have once known this sheltering haven, and have gone forth from it, come back to it again and again, and their last desire is to die within its peaceful shadows.

Along the halls and through the apartments, everywhere is immaculate cleanliness, and everywhere is a representation of the Good Shepherd. The walls are decorated with suitable Biblical inscriptions; the Good Shepherd looks down in compassionate tenderness from exquisitely painted canvas; His statue wreathed with the pink and white roses of summer smiles benediction on the passers-by. It is the very poetry of symbolism holding ever before the erring one the recovery of the lost lamb, which was more precious than the ninety-nine who were safely sheltered within the fold.

Nor does this beautiful symbolism end here. It reappears again in the snow-white robes of the Nuns of the Good Shepherd; in the brown garb of the Magdalens, who have turned from their evil way; in the black dress of the penitents; and it is emphasized in the fact that the members of the Order are not addressed as Sister but as Mother, because it is their holy mission to comfort the unfortunate creatures that come to them, even as a mother comforteth her child who mourns. No stage ever presented a play so full of dramatic action as is daily enacted within these quiet convent walls, where women who are the very embodiment of all that is good and noble in womanhood, stretch their hands down to the lowliest member of their sex and strive to draw her up to them, but not because it means the rescue of a fallen woman, but because it is the salvation of a human soul.

But beautiful and inspiring as is the atmosphere of the House of the Good Shepherd, no sentimentalism is allowed to enter into its management. The work of rescuing the fallen ones, of weaning them from their vices, of inspiring them with new ideas, and of strengthening them to meet and overcome temptation, is a very practical undertaking and it is carried out by the Nuns of the Good Shepherd along absolutely practical lines.

There are three classes of women who may become inmates of this institution. The first are those who repent of their evil lives and desire to reform, and who come of themselves seeking its shelter. The second are mostly young girls who go astray and are placed in the institution by their friends in the hope that its restraining influence and religious teachings will turn their footsteps from the downward path; while the third class are mostly young girls committed to it by the Courts. In the latter class are girls so young as to be mere children, who have not yet done serious wrong, but who are surrounded by such evil environments and such great temptations that they are sent to the House of the Good Shepherd simply as a sanctuary to protect them from the dangers that beset them.

As soon as a woman comes to the House of the Good Shepherd she is placed in charge of one of the Mothers, a woman of intellect and heart, human, tender, sympathetic and loving, who listens to her story and places her in the penitent class. She is then given work that fills every minute of her time, except the hours for devotion and the brief interval for recreation, and sends her tired to rest at night.

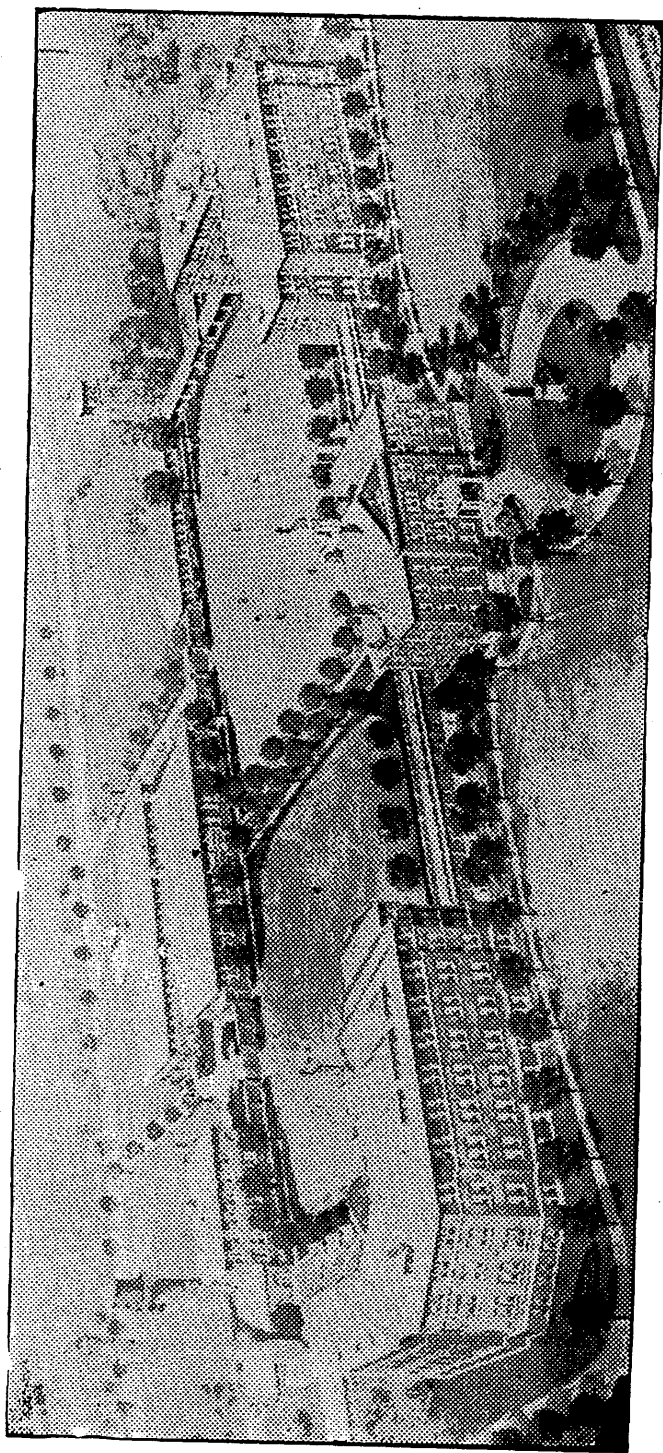

The shortest period for which an inmate will be received in the House of the Good Shepherd is six months. At the end of that time the penitent can leave if she so desires, or if the Court or her friends permit. If she wishes to remain longer, however, she may do so indefinitely, and as a matter of fact there are many women in the House of the Good Shepherd in Chicago who have known no other home for a period ranging from five to twenty years.

Reformatories are not commonly cheerful places, but what strikes the observer most in the House of the Good Shepherd is the spirit of quiet and peaceful happiness. It is the expression of life that has righted itself and is finding the peace that passeth all understanding in well-doing. Over all is the unmistakable atmosphere of home.

Such is the work of the House of the Good Shepherd and such are the results it accomplishes. It is a helper for those who wish to reform and an asylum for those who find the scorn of the world too hard to bear; a refuge for those temptation-driven; for, as one poor creature said, who had found shelter in it, "If I could not have come here, I should have thrown myself into the river." The need of such a place is attested by the fact that the new building, 350 feet long by 50 feet wide and four stories high, is already overcrowded, containing nearly 400 inmates, and that the calls for food and shelter stretch the slender resources of the institution to the utmost. No charity could be more worthy or more noble. No charity can appeal more strongly to the generous people of a great city. The good Sisters are at the present time heavily in debt; additional buildings are required; the calls for shelter and protection are becoming more and more numerous; in the interest of fallen humanity and in defense of the honor and integrity of Christian homes the Sisters of the Good Shepherd appeal to you for your sympathy and help.

No other civilizing power on earth realizes this truth more fully than the Catholic Church. To this Divine Institution Christ committed the work of education, when He commanded: "Go forth, teach all nations . . . , teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." The mission to teach is therefore the peculiar right and duty of the Catholic Church, and in every age of her life has engaged the earnest thought and service of her hierarchy.

the world with the aims and purposes of his noble life, and nowhere is better evidence to be found of this great love and devotion than in St. Mary's Training School for Boys, at Des Plaines, Illinois. One distinct purpose Archbishop Feehan had in view in the establishment of this great institution, the result of a life study and experience, was to eliminate in a school of correction, the dangerous influences which exist in state schools of that class.

With these ideas in view, a farm consisting of four hundred acres, twenty-five miles northwest of Chicago, was purchased in 1883. To this garden spot, a few years later, an additional five hundred and seventy acres were added, so as to afford the largest possible opportunity for development and to meet the correctly anticipated emergencies.

St. Mary's Training School is about one and a half miles from the village of Des Plaines, on the North-Western and Wisconsin railroads. The land is rich and fertile and the wooded nooks and crystal waters of the Des Plaines river add to the beauty of the verdant fields, the glens and the clustered groves. The wooded sections still retain their primeval beauty. The stately pine and the lordly oak tower above their fellows, while the broad sweeping elm and maple provide beneath their branches a cozy retreat from the elements. In addition, a large variety of other hardwood trees, including a rare variety of ebony, adorn the grounds and direct our thoughts to the admiration and study of nature and of nature's God. The workmen in the fields, the herds of cattle "lowing o'er the lea," the sporting lambs in pastures green, and the busy farm-yard life, all surrounded with the generous gifts and loveliness of nature, present to the visitor to St. Mary's a scene of pastoral beauty unsurpassed in the Northwest.

Near the center of the beautiful park is erected the boys' home and school. The approach to the building is through a gateway opening upon a winding drive, bordered by beds of flowers and beautiful shrubbery, the tasteful and well-kept appearance of which, give assurance of the care and attention bestowed on every department of the institution. The walks are screened with foliage, which exhales a breath of health and freshness, charming the visitor with the surroundings and impressing him with their beauty before he enters the institution.

city to be transported from the filth and squalor of our streets to this restful home and scene of beauty!

To meet the increasing demands on the institution, the Most Reverend Archbishop Quigley has devoted himself, with his usual enterprise, vigor and self-sacrifice, to the solution of this great problem, even to the relinquishment of his summer home at Des Plaines, which is now being used in caring for the boys.

His Grace has spared no efforts to make happy the homeless boy. The boys have in Archbishop Quigley, in truth and in deed, a father and a friend, who is perpetuating the noble work of his saintly predecessor in carrying forward to newer and broader fields the charitable cause of dependent children. The imposing and commodious buildings, as illustrated herein, and which are now nearing completion, are substantial proof of his interest, love and devotion.

The new buildings, arranged around a large quadrangle to guarantee superior light and ventilation, accommodate over eight hundred boys. The first floor of the main building contains the class and recitation room, and the second and third floors the dormitory. A large refectory, the seating capacity of which is 800, is a feature of the general plan. The buildings are all connected by covered passages and corridors and are supported by steel throughout. The entire stairways are of iron, and the walls are lined with the best fireproof brick, thereby making every staircase the best kind of a fire escape. The buildings are separated by the latest improved fireproof doors. The exterior of the structures is faced with a strong, impervious brick, to make the buildings strong and substantial, and at the same time simple and economical in harmony with the spirit of the institution.

Every improvement suggested by architectural science in the line of heating, lighting, ventilating and general sanitary devices is employed, to make the institution what it is intended to be, one of the most modern and up-to-date structures of its kind in the United States.

The magnificent designs do credit to the architect, William J. Brinkmann, of Chicago, who before drawing the plans visited and studied the improved architectural features of the leading institutions for boys in this country.

In view of the large responsibility consequent on such an undertaking, Archbishop Quigley has surrounded himself with business men of mature judgment and experience, all of whom take an active interest in the work and conduct of the institution. Messrs. D. F. Bremner, John A. Lynch, Michael Cudahy, James Burke, Andrew Graham and Reverend G. T. McCarthy constitute the Board of Trustees.

But the work of the institution is of paramount importance to any matters or features of exterior interest.

The methods employed in training the boys are of the highest consideration. The work of directing the studies and discipline is now in the hands of the good Sisters of Mercy. Reverend G. T. McCarthy, formerly of Holy Name Cathedral, a young, a zealous, active and energetic priest, whose executive ability is very marked, is superintendent. The work is thorough and the discipline is firm, yet very kindly; and the moral influence on the character of the boys who have been in the institution but a brief period is specially observable. Their high spirit and playfulness does not indicate that they are under any restraint, but, on the contrary, give an impression of cheerfulness, happiness and contentment. The boy's honor is appealed to, his better nature is developed by the application of true pedagogical and ethical principles. The child is taught the meaning of absolute right and is required to reduce it to practice; and the result is upright, manly, truthful, honest, obedient and respectful pupils. They are made to see that if they have been unfortunate in their environment, yea, even in their parentage, that there is still somebody interested in them. They are impressed with the fact that the law is not intended to be cruel or to inflict unwarranted punishment, and they are made to respect law as being necessary to the welfare of human society. The benefit the boys derive from their training can best be appreciated by coming in contact with them. Besides farming, gardening, flower culture and other lines of botany, the boys are instructed in shoemaking, tailoring, painting, carpentering and other trades.

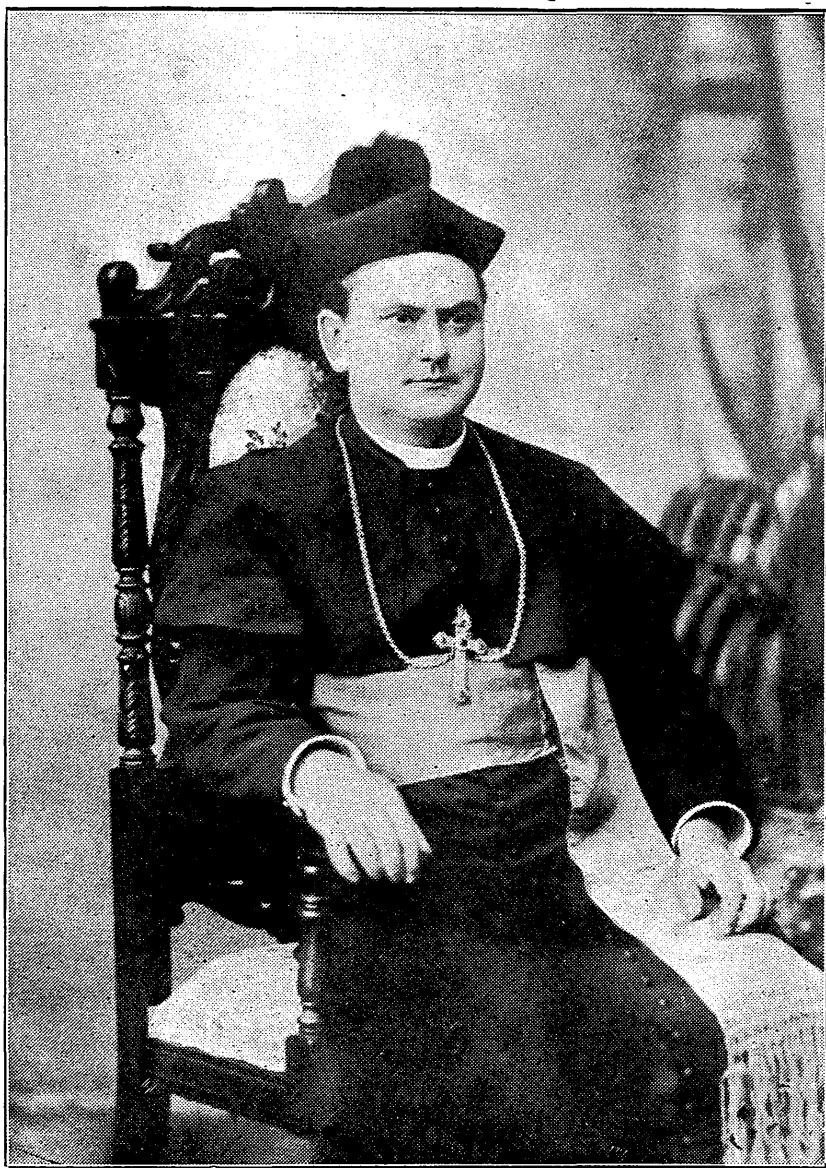

Particular attention is given to the health of the boys and the general sanitary conditions by the esteemed and careful resident physician, Dr. Earle.

Lenten Regulations, 1906

(Official.)

The following are the Lenten Regulations for the Archdiocese of Chicago:

All days of Lent from Ash Wednesday (February 28) to Easter Sunday (April 15), Sundays excepted, are fast days of obligation for all the faithful who have attained their twenty-first year and are not otherwise lawfully dispensed.

The sick, the very poor, pregnant women, those nursing infants, and in general all who, because of old age, weakly constitutions or hard labor cannot fast without detriment to their health, are exempted from fasting. Those exempted from fasting are not restricted in the use of meat on days when it is allowed by dispensation at the principal meal.

Those obliged to fast are restricted to one full meal in the day, which should not ordinarily be taken before noon, and to a collection not exceeding the fourth part of an ordinary meal in the evening, though the use of some warm drink, such as tea, coffee or chocolate, with a small piece of bread in the morning, is authorized.

Abstinence from flesh meat implied in the precept of fasting is, in this diocese, dispensed with on Sundays without restriction, and at the principal meal on all other days, except Wednesdays and Fridays, and the Saturdays in Ember Week and Holy Week.

The use of fish with flesh meat is forbidden at the same meal, even on Sundays in Lent.

Lard, the fat rendered from any kind of meat, may be used in preparing food on all days during Lent and on all days of fast and abstinence throughout the year.

The above dispensations from the general laws were granted by an Indult of the Apostolic See, August 3, 1887, and subsequently renewed.

By virtue of an Indult of the Holy See, granted March 15, 1895, and renewed Feb. 25, 1905, workingmen and their families are permitted to use flesh meat once a day on all fast days and abstinence days throughout the year, except Fridays, Ash Wednesday, Wednesday and Saturday in Holy Week, and the Vigil of Christmas.

Those availing themselves of this Indult are not allowed to use fish and flesh meat at the same meal. It is the earnest desire of the Holy See, and ours as well, that they perform some other act of mortification, such as abstaining from intoxicating liquors.

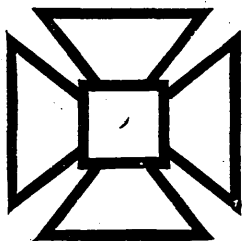

JAMES EDWARD QUIGLEY,

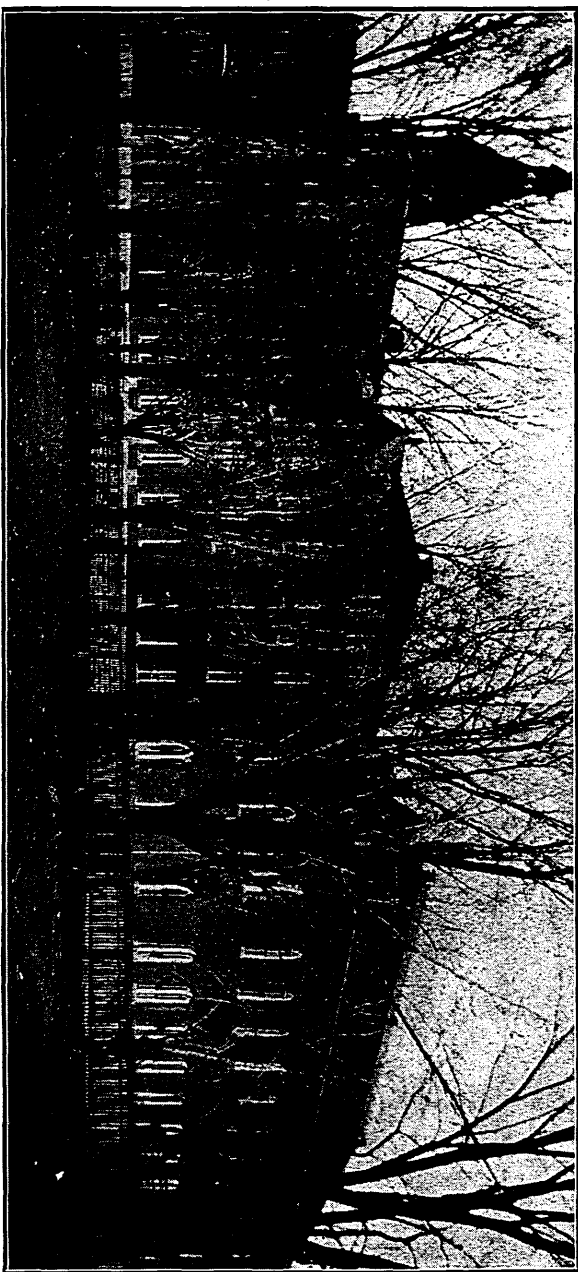

Archbishop.

How Many Catholics in the World?

In citing statistics such as encyclopædias and dictionaries afford us, we give the first place to that estimate of Catholic numbers which is least favorable to us. Thus, 152,000,000 appears to be the lowest absolute total given in statistical reckonings of more recent times. Herzog, however, in his Religious Encyclopædia estimates them at 200,000,000, and Belim and Wagner (1880) at 250,938,500. Others put us at 218,000,000 or 230,000,000. The estimate of Herr F. Kattenbusch, professor of ecclesiastical history at Gottingen—probably the most recent computation we have—rises as high as 250,000,000 to 260,000,000. The “British Almanac” for 1905 gives 240,000,000, thus showing fairly close agreement with the Protestant professor. As for comparative numbers, all those we have seen place the total number of Catholics at something less than double that of all Protestant denominations taken together, in spite of the manifold doctrinal diversities of the latter. And it should be noticed that under the term “Protestants” the statistics include all kinds of professing Christians springing from the Reformation of the sixteenth century, the Church of England—in all its shades, from lowest to highest—among the rest.—Rev. F. M. de Zulueta, S. J.

Connected with this hospital is the Novitiate of the Alexian Brothers of the United States. The brothers have a large field of work before them and need of more members to co-operate with them in their work of charity. ## MOTHERS, REMEMBER THE BOY

Here is what LESLIE M. SHAW, Sec'y of U. S. Treasury, says of him:

"The boy is worth more than any other creature that treads the earth, yet far more than any other thing in the world, I think there is less place for him. Now, don't misunderstand me. He is less welcome anywhere than others; there are less kind words for him than anybody else—MAKE HOME ATTRACTIVE but install them in your home and keep him home as much as possible. Has he a penchant for billiards? Get him a table, even if it be a miniature one. The more hours each day your son spends at home the more and the sooner he develops a clean, healthy social temperament."
